HIGH TIME.

By CONSTANCE D'ARCY MACKAY.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Then I suppose it's no use to argue."

"Not the slightest. When a Millard makes up her mind it stays made up, and I made up my mind yesterday, Bobbie."

"You mean your Aunt Isabel made it up for you?" Robert Ashton answered, looking at Katherine Millard as she perched beside him in the bow of the boat. The wind blew her hair into distracting ripples. She put back a strand of it as she faced him, replying:

"She did have a good deal to do with it. I'll admit. But, after all, she has lived much longer in this world than I have and has gained more wisdom."

"Yes, worldly wisdom."

"Isn't that often another name for common sense? Besides, there are moments when I feel that she knows me better than I know myself. I do love the ceteras of life so, Bobbie! Love in a Harlem flat would never do for me. I want all the pate de fois gras of existence and none of the rye bread. And you know from the first I've never given you the least cause for hope. I've always been perfectly frank with you, haven't I?"

"Always."

"Then I can't see why you should protest so much."

"Well, for one reason I hate to see you flinging yourself away on old Senator Rathbone."

"Thank you!"

"And, for another, what man gives up the girl he loves without a struggle? It isn't human nature to forego a thing simply because it's beyond your reach. And then there's a third reason. Why could be so gloriously happy?"

The girl averted her eyes.

"Couldn't we?" he persisted.

"I don't know," she faltered.

"Ah, but you do know! You know we're one in everything. That's why I dare to persist so much. We like the same things. We like the same people. We have the same sense of humor—except in the case of Senator Rathbone."

"Bobbie, if you make fun of my friend I won't take you sailing again."

"But, Katherine!"

"Now, Bobbie!" For a second time she faced him squarely. "I've told you my mind's made up, and I mean what I say. You've been a good friend to me, and I've enjoyed the times we've had together. But if we're to be good friends still this kind of thing can't keep going on. Don't you see how hard you are making it for me? Either you must promise me not to mention it again or I'll have to give up seeing you entirely."

"All right," he replied, with that characteristic boyishness that women always found so adorable in him. "I'll go."

He nodded at her smilingly, and she told herself that, after all, he was only a boy with a boy's and—twenty-five and not yet grown up! But that was because she was looking at his smile and not at what lay in his eyes.

She let out the main sheet of the White Lady until the spray dashed across the bow of the trim little craft. It was a gray day, with a hint of rain in the air and the sea gladsly hovering inland—such a day as sends the usual summer resister to a cozy chair by flickering logs with a novel close at hand and the fisher folk out to open sea with the promise of a heavy catch.

Between gray green water and slate gray sky the White Lady seemed the only thing afloat as she skimmed and ducked and lifted on the crest of the waves. They were racing to windward now, and the homes of the shore dwellers faded in the distance. Here and there stood the solitary houses of fishermen; then these, too, became fewer.

The shore rose to bare, rocky headlands capped with stunted pines—gaunt, jagged rocks with the water creeping at their base. Islands rose, mere specks in the distance, only discernible because of the surf that played about them or the dwelling or two that reclined them from utter loneliness. The White Lady thrashed and flew, so tense, so alive, so seemingly a part of the elements, that it was hard to believe her a thing of wood and canvas.

"Look out!" sang Ashton as the boat came suddenly about. "That was a pretty close shave."

"Who sails with me holds life in fee," laughed Katherine, intoxicated with wave and wind and foam.

"There is such a thing as common sense," quoted Ashton.

But the wine of the sea was in Katherine's blood. She rounded another flat rock triumphantly.

"Careful!" cautioned Ashton.

"Afraid?" she taunted, with uplifted chin, and then laughed as scarlet surged across his keen young face.

"Sail where you like! I don't care!" he cried.

"You think," she scoffed recklessly, "that just because I'm a girl I can't manage my own boat. Why, rounding these rocks is a perfect game for me! I've done it lots of times. Of course I know the summer people are warned against it. But I'm not a summer person at heart. I'm what Captain Davy calls a regular salt, and I allow no mutiny on the part of my crew. So there! And whoever accepts my invitation to sail accepts the risks that accompany it. Sing ho, sing ho, for a sailor's life, sing ho, sing ho, for a—"

They both knew what had happened when the boat jarred from bow to stern, knew it before the bitter sea water dashed in their faces as they struggled toward a flat rock that uprose from the sea. When they reached it, it was the girl who spoke first.

"Well?" she said gamely, and then beneath her breath, "If I had had sense enough to obey!"

"If I had only jerked the tiller from you!" he said in answer. But neither of them spoke what was uppermost in their minds.

No hope to try for the shore, with its steep cliffs where the water rolled and eddied, and the rock on which they stood was always covered at high tide. Already the water oozed and gurgled about its crevices. With every wave it rose a fraction higher. The tide was coming in.

"If only some one would see us," whispered the girl, "some passing boat or—"

The words died in her throat. The lonely expanse of water showed no hopeful sail. Ashton was staring at a speck that showed in the far distance—Deerhaven island. When he spoke all the boyishness was gone from his voice.

"There's only one way, Katherine. Would you rather I tried for it, or shall we stay here together?"

"I'd rather you tried for it," she said bravely, seeing as well as he that there was not a moment to lose.

"You can watch my coat and shoes till I come back." His voice rang cheerfully. "I'm in splendid practice; swam a couple of miles only the day before yesterday." He did not add that Captain Davy had followed with a dory, "step up your heart, girl," he cried, with a touch of his old gaiety.

"And you?" She would have cheered him on, but words failed her.

"I'll remember that it's for you I'm swimming. The biggest breakers in the world won't make me forget that."

He waved her goodbye as if he were off for a pleasure jaunt, and she could see as he struck out squarely, making every stroke count.

The long swing of the seas rolled between them, widening the space until her straining eyes could discover him no longer. The water lapped and gurgled about the rock on which she stood, rising ever higher. There was something hungry in the way the little waves crept up, reaching greedily. She tried to think of other things, to switch for a sail. From far away came the sound of surf breaking slowly against the reefs and now and again the mournful, lonely note of the bell buoy.

Slowly the water rose. It touched her ankles, her knees. The lift of each oncoming wave nearly took her off her feet. At that new panic seized her. If she were swept from the rock, what then? Gropingly and numb with cold she reached for the long growths of seaweed with which the rock was covered. Lengthened out they came almost to her shoulders. She twisted her hands in them and waited.

There came the moment when the water reached her shoulders, and each new wave made her shut her eyes and breathe gaspingly. She had long since given up hope of rescue. There remained but one thought—that whatever came she must stay where they would find her.

After all, drowning was not so hard. After the first deep strangling breath she felt herself slipping into unconsciousness. Snatches of past events, trivial and vivid, shone before her for a moment; then all merged into the blackness that closed her round.

When she opened her eyes she met the anxious gaze of Ashton bending over her. She wondered dimly if she belonged to the old life, and then his voice, perturbed and human, came to her as from a great distance.

"A moment more," he was saying, "and we would have been too late."

Then with a start it all came back to her—all that had occurred. She raised her head. Captain Davy was sailing in the stern of the rescuing boat looking both triumphant and concerned.

"Guess your aunt will be pretty glad to have you back," he beamed. "And so will that senator they say you're engaged to."

"But I'm not engaged to him," she protested faintly. She appealed to Ashton.

"Tell him," she commanded.

"That it isn't so and never will be."

"Katherine!"

"You say that as if you thought I was overwrought and speaking wildly. But I'm not. I never was surer of myself in my life than I am this minute. Oh, Bobbie, can't you see that in that hour alone out there I learned everything, the heights, the depths, the things that don't count and the things that do?"

And then as she saw the amazed delight in his eyes deepen to the rapture of certainty she held out both her hands to him. "For once a Millard has changed her mind," she whispered.

And Captain Davy, scanning the horizon with careful scrutiny, heaved a sympathetic sigh.

"Looks as if we were in for a spell of fair weather ahead," he muttered. "Winds turned, clouds are liftin', and all's well!"

The College Game.

Silas Whipperville had not been in college over a month until he began using all the student slang in addition to university mannerisms. Then he wrote his father like this:

Dear Father—This college game is certainly expensive. It is hard to get good results without the necessary money. I am a stranger here, and my credit is no good. Your loving son, SILAS.

By the next mail he received this: Dear Silas—Cut the game. Your father never could play poker, so I don't see no use in your trying to win. Your loving father.

Won Her a Diadem.

How did the French come into Sicily? A woman did it. At a festive entertainment held at a French court Beatrice, countess of Savoy and wife of Charles of Anjou, the brother of Louis IX. of France, was removed from the superior range of seats occupied by her two younger sisters, the queen of France and the queen of England. Mortified by the humiliation, she returned to her apartments and burst into tears. Upon learning the cause of her chagrin and her saying that she would be able to give up her life to confine her tresses for one hour beneath a diadem Charles embraced her affectionately and said: "Set your heart at rest, countess, for before long I will make you a greater queen than either of your sisters." So he promised her. He defeated Manfred, the last of the Norman kings, and caused Conradino, the great-grandson of the Emperor Frederick, to be mercilessly slain, he himself and Beatrice witnessing the scene. Upon the death of his brother Charles became king of Naples, thus fulfilling the cherished desire of his wife for a diadem.

The Wrist and the Arm.

The real wrist, as one might say, is the elbow joint. It is all hand, practically speaking, from that point to the tips of the fingers. When you turn your wrist it is the whole forearm that makes the twist, and every movement of the fingers is controlled by the muscles of the forearm. The power to turn the wrist to and fro at the elbow is possessed only by human beings and monkeys, and even the higher apes are not able to do the trick nearly as well as we can. In this movement the great biceps muscle in the upper arm is importantly concerned, its powerful action in turning the forearm outward being accountable for the fact that we are able to put so much strength into a twist in that direction than the opposite way. Many of our most familiar tools indeed, such as the screwdriver, are made with reference to the anatomical peculiarity in question. It is for this reason and no other that all screws turn to the right.

Reed and Strout.

Thomas R. Reed served in the navy during the civil war, and in 1865 he returned to Portland to practice law. One of the strongest men at the Portland bar at the time was A. A. Strout. Before beginning the trial of a suit it was Strout's habit to inquire of every juror as to the state of his health and impress each with the idea that the lawyer was solicitous of that juror's personal welfare. Reed and Strout were constantly antagonizing each other, though they were very good friends. In nearly every case of importance Strout and Reed were on opposite sides. It was annoying indeed for the suave Strout to hear Reed draw out before the opening of a case:

"Well, your honor, Brother Strout having finished his morning task of shaking hands with the jury, we may now, I hope, proceed with the business of the court."

Beating Women.

"If it is true that national adages give an insight into the ideas of a people," says the Berlin Radical, "women must occupy a strange position in Russia. One of these old saws runs, 'Love your wife as much as your mule,' and another tells the good man, 'Shake your wife as you would a fruit tree.' That woman is not considered frail is shown by the adage: 'You may safely beat your wife with a broom handle, for she is not made of porcelain.' Beating must be considered a wholesome pastime, to judge from the saying. If your wife deserves a beating in the morning, remind her of her faults by giving her another at noon." In justification of this kind of attention the Russian says: "The more a man beats his wife the better his meals will be."

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery"—was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered the remedy, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, and it has a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extracted from some valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the new world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the highest endorsement from the leading medical experts, teachers and writers on medicine.

Medical writers recommend them as the very best remedies for the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised.

A full list of the diseases for which it is recommended is given on the wrapper, compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the doctor as above.

From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompanied with the loquacious discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections treated are liable to terminate properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

Problems Here and Beyond

THERE is a marked tendency to investigate and an eager world to accept the mysteries of life after death, explanations and theories of which science is exploiting and our magazines and periodicals are reporting. The fact that so many of the leading monthly publications have simultaneously come out with serial articles on the subject shows that the demand is keen for anything touching on this vital problem. The world is clamoring and would grasp the slightest straw, for faith alone no longer satisfies. A material age demands something more tangible. Because there is this demand we have that large percentage of fake supply from so-called mediums, spiritualists and phsyic demonstrators.

Scientists are slow and from their laboratories the world does not get quick enough results, and yet what has leaked out from these work shops of phsyic investigation is truly wonderful. The articles appearing in our present day magazines give us an inkling of what keen investigators have recorded. Let science continue to grapple with the problem, but the untrained mind of the layman can find better pursuit, for it is only the scientifically trained mind which can separate facts from fallacies and appreciate evidence of phenomena at its true value. We are too prone to give fictitious significance to anything observed under a high mental tension. This is also true of some scientists who may better spend their time on social problems than to delve beyond. This world is full of vital conundrums and we have plenty of material to work with and observation itself to spur us on to the amelioration of many heart-rending conditions for which there must be remedies.

There is something like the nobility of God's created ones in those who have stopped on their way to find the cause of and help for tuberculosis, leprosy and that kindred type of ravaging disease that their fellows may enjoy the life that was given to them on this sphere.

There is something of the divinity in man among those who are seeking to fathom the right beginning of a moral education for our children—those who are satisfied that neither our schools, or our churches do the work as it should be done, since so many grow up to maturity and become burdens and blots on society. Not unless we go back to the origin of man himself can we get at the nucleus of the problem any better than to reconstruct his moral training. While stout hearts and big brains work out this problem there is the little band of mercy which seeks to make the best of conditions, bad as they are, and these are the ones who conduct charities, direct prison reform and care for outcast children, all of which are noble works in themselves. All these classes of investigators miss their aim many times and may be criticised freely, and yet if one spark is struck out which will light the way they have not been in vain.

One does not have to go beyond this mundane sphere to solve problems, for those of this life are infinitely more interesting in their evident phases of development than the great secret of immortality, which the querulous would wrest from the void beyond. "Faith is required of thee, and a sincere life, not loftiness of intellect, nor deepness in the mysteries of God."

Until science has a better substitute for the faith which is the ground on which all the practical good in this world is founded we had better cherish it and not fly to that brink of uncertainty and in our peering beyond turn our backs upon the problems we should face here.

A Line on that Loving Cup.

A man there was and he made a gift,
Even as you and I;
And gasoline was daily sniffed
As he did cometh by.

He went in quest of a loving cup,
And gold he gathered freely.
Feign not surprise, but just get wise,
Blair Hart got that cup, really.

A loving cup was offered up,
It was a heart to Hart surprise
By Bigelow, who said "What ho!
Than Hart, there is no better Supervisor."

Yet lo! we marvel at the change,
Since Blair's defeat he would arrange,
And wonder, if ambitious to be higher up,
He feign would sup
From out a similar loving cup.

Avaunt such thoughts, "The goblet perish,"
Bigelow decries and does not cherish,
Hand him neither cup nor stein,
Symbolic of that awful wine,
Hand him a lemon.

That hacking cough continues
Because your system is exhausted and your powers of resistance weakened.
Take Scott's Emulsion.

It builds up and strengthens your entire system.
It contains Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites so prepared that it is easy to take and easy to digest.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00

BLAIR HART, candidate for Supervisor of the First District, is essentially a man of the people and for the people and that is why he is being supported throughout the district by citizens regardless of party affiliations. This is as it should be, for he has made a splendid record as a public official and does not have to purchase the support of a newspaper to sound his praises. Voters, cast your ballots for Blair Hart and you will make no mistake.

CANDIDATE BIGELOW is both for and against the saloons—that is to say, he is playing a double-dealing game to get votes. This is not surprising when one considers that he turned down the platform of the Republican County Convention that made the mistake of nominating him, and is now making a grand-stand play to catch votes on a vicious platform of his own construction. It is but natural to assume that such a man is not entitled to the support of either Republicans, Democrats or Prohibitionists.

He is in a class by himself.

United States vs. Japan.

Serious complications are threatened between the United States and Japan, owing to the Superscription contest in this district. If, as it is asserted, candidate Bigelow, who has been conducting a sort of experimental chicken farm for the Mikado in this valley, has discharged his Japs until after the campaign, diplomatic relations between the two countries may be broken off at any time.

Duck Shooting Season.

The duck shooting season opened Thursday and a number of local shooters secured their share of the birds, which are reported to be quite plentiful in the tules south of town. The shooting grounds for the most part have been leased to city sports and little ground is left for local duck-shooters, who are lucky indeed to get a shot at a stray bird now and then.

GOOD ROADS MEETING AT GLEN ELLEN.

Will L. Ashe Outlines Plan of Action for Betterment of Our Highways

The good roads meeting held in Glen Ellen last Saturday evening was largely attended, quite a number of people being present from Santa Rosa, Sonoma and other near-by towns.

Will L. Ashe, who presided over the meeting, said a change in the present road law was desired by good roads advocates and outlined the following plan:

First—The Board of Supervisors to designate certain roads as the main highways of the county, and all the property in the county, including that inside incorporated cities, which is now taxed for road purposes, be taxed to build these main roads under the supervision of a superintendent of roads.

Second—The remainder of the roads to be district roads and to be governed the same as the district schools by trustees elected in the district.

Third—Whenever the county should build five miles of main road up to standard the State to agree to maintain same by paying into the county treasury each year a sum sufficient to do so.

Fourth—To place a State tax or license on automobiles to raise money to help maintain the standard roads.

The meeting was addressed in addition to Mr. Ashe by Assemblyman Weske and Col. L. W. Juillard of Santa Rosa, Supervisor Blair Hart of Lakeville, Thomas Johnson of Glen Ellen, Fred. T. Duhring of Sonoma and J. K. Bigelow of Agua Caliente.

Thomas Johnson, during his remarks, said it was impossible to build good roads under the present laws in road districts like Glen Ellen road district, for instance. In that district he said there are a great many main roads and also many expensive district roads leading into the mountains, where property was assessed for a small amount. That there are forty miles of roads in that district and only $1,700 a year was raised by taxation to maintain them.

Successful Entertainment and Ball.

The entertainment and ball given by the Catholic ladies in aid of St. Francis' Church at Agua Caliente Springs, last Saturday evening, was well attended and the ladies netted a neat sum for a most worthy object. The entertainment program was an excellent and enjoyable one and the grounds surrounding the hotel, which had been generously turned over to the ladies by Mr. and Mrs. Richards, presented the appearance of a veritable fairy bower.

Assemblyman Weske

Assemblyman H. W. A. Weske, who is again the Republican nominee for re-election in the Fourteenth District, was one of an automobile party from Santa Rosa that accompanied Congressman Duncan E. McKinlay to this place Thursday evening. Mr. Weske, at the last session of the Legislature made a good record, and did much for the people of this district. He will poll a large vote in this valley.

County Road Construction

E. H. Johannsen, the efficient road overseer of the San Luis district, has about completed three miles of new county road through the Potter, Smith and Filippini ranches.

Engagement Announced

The engagement of Miss Maud Fraser of Alameda to Rev. Chas. C. Champlin, pastor of the Black Diamond Congregational Church, has been announced. Both bride and groom in the prospective are former residents of Sonoma and enjoy an extensive acquaintance in this valley. They are also graduates of the State University. It is said the wedding will not take place until after the holidays.

AN ACCUSED MAN HELD TO ANSWER.

Luigi Lea Must Now Face Serious Charge in the Superior Court.

The preliminary examination of Luigi Lea, accused by Giacomo Rignoni of being his assailant on the night of August 3d last when he was mysteriously stabbed under the cover of darkness, was held before Judge Small on Wednesday afternoon.

The prosecution was conducted by District Attorney Clarence Lea, while the accused man was represented by attorneys H. P. Mathewson and Frank Sprague.

The only evidence introduced connecting the accused with the stabbing was that of Rignoni, who has fully recovered from the effects of the knife thrusts, and who swore that Luigi was his assailant, although the accused man has maintained his innocence from the very hour he was arrested at his home in this place shortly after the cutting.

No evidence was introduced for the accused and his attorneys argued that he be discharged from custody for lack of evidence to hold him.

Judge Small, however, did not agree with counsel for the accused on that point, and held Luigi in the sum of $2,500 to appear before the Superior Court to answer to a charge of assault with intent to commit murder.

On to Eureka!

The Northwestern Pacific railroad is making a number of changes in location in connection with the extension of the line and its construction department is now busy north of Sherwood. A party of twenty surveyors and assistants began work in Eel river canyon Monday. The actual work of construction on the line from Sherwood to Eureka will begin early next spring.

The changes which will be made in the route as the result of the new surveys now under way are of minor importance only, being simply for the purpose of securing the most desirable line for the road.

New Sonoma County Court House.

Work on the new Sonoma county court house is progressing very satisfactorily at present, says the Santa Rosa Republican, and if nothing unforeseen happens to prevent, it is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by June of next year. The placing of heavy granite steps at the entrance on Third street is in progress and they are nearly all in place. These stone steps have been cut from large pieces of granite shipped to Santa Rosa and shaped at the yards on Fourteenth street.

At present the work on the terra cotta exterior finish is being delayed by the failure of several carloads of terra cotta to arrive from the factory, but this will soon be started again, and it is the desire of the contractors to have the outside completed and the roof in place before the winter season begins. This done, it will be easy to do the interior work during the winter, and no delays will be experienced in the work.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to publicly express our heartfelt thanks to those kind friends and neighbors who so kindly aided us in the hour of our late bereavement in the death of L. M. Johannsen, which deprived the community of a good citizen and his family of a devoted husband and a kind father.

County Clerk F. L. Wright and Deputy Clerk Jack Ford attended the good roads meeting in Glen Ellen last Saturday evening.

Fred. T. Duhring and J. K. Bigelow attended the good roads meeting at Glen Ellen last Saturday night. They made the trip in Mr. Bigelow's automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bates arrived home Tuesday evening from their six-weeks sojourn in the East, where they visited relatives in several of the States.

Chas. J. Poppe, the pioneer merchant of Glen Ellen, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Amy Ethel Poppe, left for Los Angeles yesterday morning, where Miss Poppe will take a year's course in elocution.

Fred. D. Spaulding, who died recently from sunstroke on an Arizona desert near Yuma, had his life insured in the Bankers' Life Association of Des Moines, Iowa, for $6,120, which has been paid to the widow.

T. J. MacQuiddy and family, after a year's residence in Oakland, will return to Sonoma some time this month. They will occupy their old home on Patton street, which has been occupied by a tenant during their absence.

Messrs. A. J. Gallagher and W. A. Granfield and Miss Loretta Monahan of San Francisco spent Saturday and Sunday at the Muldray residence. Mr. Gallagher has just returned from a trip throughout the East. While there he was the guest of Mr. Muldray's sister.

John Stademan, who recently arrived in town from Astoria, Or., where he met with frightful injuries two months ago, has so far recovered as to be upon our streets with the aid of crutches. Jack dropped into our sanctum Thursday and aside from a crippled limb, which will be as good as ever in the course of time, we must confess was looking fine considering the terrible ordeal he passed through.

KENWOOD HOTEL BURNED DOWN.

Narrow Escape of Landlord Farley and Little Family.

The Kenwood Hotel, located in the village of Kenwood eleven miles north of this place, was burned to the ground at an early hour yesterday morning.

The fire originated in the barn and was not discovered until it had communicated to the hotel and it was a mass of flames. The lessee of the hotel, James Farley, and his wife and children, barely escaped being burned to death, making their escape from the burning building in their night robes.

The hotel and barn, together with their contents, went up in the flames, nothing even to the cash register, being saved.

The origin of the fire is unknown.

MCKINLAY MEETING A GRAND SUCCESS.

People Turn Out En Masse to Listen to Gifted Orator

The first gun of the political campaign was fired by the Republicans of this place last Thursday night in honor of Congressman Duncan E. McKinlay, than whom no more scholarly or gifted orator ever addressed a Sonoma gathering.

Early in the evening the distinguished Congressman arrived in town from Santa Rosa, amid the blaze of bonfires, the booming of cannon and martial music.

The meeting, which was essentially a McKinlay demonstration accorded to the distinguished visitor by the people of Sonoma, was called to order by Hon. H. P. Mathewson, who, after a few preliminary remarks, read off the names of the Vice-Presidents, most of whom took their seats upon the platform, which was decorated in the National colors, with here and there a bouquet of flowers and steel engravings of the Republican standard bearers, Taft and Sherman.

The Vice Presidents were as follows: J. M. Cheney, H. Appleton, H. H. Granice, Harry Weise, A. M. Hardman, Henry J. Chauvet, E. T. Allen, Theodore Skillman, Chas. Patter, A. Landsborough and Jas. Campbell.

Chairman Mathewson, after the Vice Presidents had been seated, in a brief speech introduced the speaker of the evening, Hon. Duncan E. McKinlay.

Mr. McKinlay, upon facing the audience, received a warm greeting, and for two hours held his hearers spellbound by his easy, graceful and forcible oratory. At no time during his speech did they lose interest in the flow of words which seemed to come spontaneously from the lips of one of the most flowery orators that this State has yet produced.

Mr. McKinlay touched upon the principal political issues of the day, which are familiar to all newspaper readers, in a forcible and convincing manner, and made a lasting impression upon his hearers.

At the conclusion of his speech the meeting adjourned, and Mr. McKinlay was congratulated upon all sides for his masterful oratory. The floor of the large hall was then cleared and dancing was indulged until 12 o'clock.

The meeting, which had been arranged by local County Committee Beretta was in every way befitting our distinguished Congressman, the Hon. Duncan E. McKinlay, than whom no man was ever nearer to the hearts of a grateful constituency than the "man that does things."

The suits of Mrs. W. R. Hamilton vs. Thos. Wilson, et al., and Phoebe M. Decker vs. Ellen Graham, to October 12th.

Wise Talks by the Office Boy.

Life is full of checks and many of them are forgeries. Still some people figure it is cheaper to owe rent than to move. I guess trouble is the only thing a fellow can borrow nowadays without security, but a fellow never knows what real trouble is until he goes out with a girl who wears a "Merry Widow" hat. You are seated outside on a car and she turns to say something when biff, your sailor or new Panama is gone or you've got a black eye. It's a good thing they don't make the men's sailors very wide this season or they'd have to run twice as many cars.

Say, a funny thing happened yesterday. A fellow came in to buy a hat and while he was screwing around and piping the lid in his big mirror, he says, "That of fine boy of yours must be a pretty new kid." "Yes," said Bert, "he's rather new but he reads old books." "I thought as much," said Mr. Man, "from some of the chestnuts he cracks." Say, wouldn't that tease you? Well, there ain't no chestnuts in our hat department, although you'll find some cracking good jokes. Have you picked your fall bonnet?

A WAR TRAGEDY.

Pathetic Incident at the Siege of Port Hudson.

At the siege at Port Hudson, La., there was one gun commanded by Alphonso Dubreuil. He was a young sugar planter who had opposed secession, but maintained that if Louisiana seceded he would go with his state. Dr. Chatriand, his neighbor, was a violent secessionist, and Dubreuil and the doctor's daughter, Anella, were lovers. Louisiana raised a company and proved so brave a Confederate that the doctor, who had opposed his daughter's marriage, readily consented, and the pair were married. His bride was accorded special permission to go into the bomb proofs of the fort, where in comparative safety she could be near her husband. There she saw him operating his enormous gun, but her heart was torn with fear for his safety. Suddenly she became excited by the noise of firing and, rushing out from her place of safety, was struck by a piece of shell and fell back lifeless. Dubreuil ran to her side, saw death in her face and went back bravely to his gun.

The next morning was beautiful, and the sun shone gloriously. There was cessation of hostilities that the dead might be buried. Thus engaged, a request came from the enemy to allow the body of a young lady to pass through our lines. It was granted. The little cortege came, preceded by a military band playing a mournful dirge, and halted at the outpost. The old musket box used as a liar was accompanied by two ladies and several officers. One of the latter, a handsome young fellow with long hair, walked calmly and slowly, but his face betrayed the greatest grief. A detail of Confederate privates acted as pallbearers. Our men uncovered their heads. All were blindfolded and led through our lines to the steamboat. They bore a last adieu to the dead bride and returned blindfolded.

It was the saddest sight I ever saw—G. N. Saussy in Spare Moments.

ASLEEP UNDER WATER.

One of the Funny Incidents Possible in a Diver's Life.

As showing how much at home a man may be today under water, I may relate an amusing story. Some months ago while a great battleship was at Malta one of the seamen divers went down to clear her propeller from some flotsam that had become entangled, and he failed to come up. It chanced that the rest of the battleship's divers were ashore, and grave concern was felt on the frigate for the missing worker. Signals by telephone and life line were sent below without avail. In the launch above the thro-tub of the air pump's cylinders went on, but the attendants looked at one another in dismay, fearing some strange tragedy deep down in those heaving green seas.

The worst was feared when some big brushes and other tools came floating to the surface, and thereupon the navigating lieutenant sent ashore an urgent message for one of the other divers. The man came on board, dressed immediately and went below, only to come up full of indignation. "Why, that fellow's been asleep all this time!" he said wrathfully. It was true. The man had just had his lunch, and, finding the work much less serious than he had thought, he finished it in a few minutes and then sat comfortably on one of the giant blades of the battleship propeller and went to sleep with inquisitive fishes swarming around him, attracted by the dazzling searchlight on his breast. The officers were so amused at the occurrence that no punishment was inflicted on the lazy one.—St. Nicholas.

The Kind of Boy He Was.

That Marshall Field of Chicago knew how to wrest victory from defeat and make stepping stones of stumbling blocks is shown by the following story told of him by a friend.

When a boy young Field went to a great merchant and asked, "Do you want a boy?" "Nobody wants a boy," replied the merchant. "Do you need a boy?" the boy persisted, not at all abashed. "Nobody needs a boy," was the reply. But he would not give up. "Well, my master, do you have to have a boy?" "I think likely we do," replied the merchant, "and I rather think we will have to have a boy just like you."

Some Few Escaped.

"Oh, John," whispered the wife as she seized the morning paper, "see what that editor has done with the account of our musketeer! He has placed it alongside the column of death notices. It's a shame. And we had such prominent people as guests too."

"I suppose," said the husband yearly, "that the editor wishes to call attention to the fact that some people are more fortunate than others."—Bohemian Magazine.

A Doubtful Proposition.

"Should a man go to college after fifty?"

"Well, he might pass muster at tennis," answered the expert. "But a man can't expect to do much in baseball or football at that age."—Pittsburg Post.

It's Chance.

"Do you think the world is growing worse?"

"Judging as 'tis," responded the old man. "There's tellin' the very first stories I heard when I was a boy."—Philadelphia Ledger.

And we get facts of our own we should take less pleasure in complaining of others.—Fresno.

The Sea Serpent Myth.

It is possible, even probable, that the sea serpent myth started in all good faith. In the southern seas grow the gigantic algae, the largest of which measure from 400 to 600 feet in length. These when rolled on the beach form enormous cables several hundred feet long and as thick as a good sized tree trunk. Such cables washed out to sea by storms may very easily have given rise to the far famed but yet undiscovered sea serpent.—New York American.

Nice, Easy Job.

The following advertisement recently appeared in an English newspaper: "Man required for demonstration purpose an old English rack (star chamber pattern); would have to be slightly stretched to show how rack worked; man should be short to start with."

Quite Fortunate.

New Girl (timidly)—I s'pose you are a fine cook, mum? Young Mistress—Bless me, no! I don't know anything about it. New Girl (relieved)—Then we'll get along famously, mum. I don't either.—New York Journal.

The Pearl of Great Price.

"Put disposition above beauty," is the advice of a modern sage to the young man who thinks of taking to himself a wife. But it requires such a long time to discover disposition.—Providence Journal.

Conflicting.

"There is safety in numbers," quoted the wise guy.

"And yet we are told that too many cooks spoil the broth," added the simple mug.—Philadelphia Record.

The brave man may fall, but he cannot yield.—Irish Proverb.

Just to prove merit—to show you how quickly Preventics can and will check colds or the Grippe—I will mail you free on request these samples and my book. Simply address Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Preventics are thoroughly harmless little Candy Cold Cure tablets. No Quinine, no laxative, nothing sickening whatever. To check early Colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is surely safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterward. Preventics will however reach a deeply seated cold. But taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break or head off these early colds. That is surely better—that is why they are named "Preventics." Promptness however is all-important. Promptness in the use of Preventics may save half your usual sickness. Feverishness, night or day, with child or adult, suggests the need of Preventics. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine Wis., today for samples and booklet. Preventics are sold by L. S. SIMMONS.

PARIS CABBIES.

The War of Words That Comes When They Block Each Other.

There is no more entertaining way to spend an idle hour in Paris than to get into a taxicab and instruct the driver to go along some street where you will be reasonably sure to get into a jam or to bump against another cab. The charm of the experience is, of course, enhanced by your ignorance of what the cabbies say.

Should your driver merely graze the wheels of another cab he will turn on his seat and yell mellifluously at the other driver, who in turn will shout back an assortment of vowels. But the best is a quarrel between two cabbies obstructing each other's way. The conversation, translated as nearly literally as is safe, goes in this wise:

"Sacred name! Why do you?"

"Holly blue! I do not!"

"Stomach on the ground! You have the face of an ox!"

"Blue stomach! Are you in chains?"

"A bas! Name of a dog!"

"Mon Dieu! Name of a pig!"

"Wow, for words to that effect! Name of a name!"

"A thousand deaths! Name of a name of a name!"

Now you begin to expect some doings. While you have not fully understood, you are satisfied that nothing but pistols and knives will wipe out the insults.

Unfortunately about this time the jam is untangled and you are allowed to drive away, but the other driver yells after you:

"Aha! You are a little piece of brown soap!"

It seems that this expression is the "fighting name" in Paris. Were it not that your cabbie owes a duty to you and must convey you to your destination you know by his facial expression that he would climb down and get that other cabbie and maul up the city with him.

He contents himself with turning about and making a face in the direction of the enemy and of going through the motion of spitting at him.

Then he says "Yoop!" to the horse, and the war is over.—Chicago Post.

THATCHING.

The Ancient Art in the Low Countries and in England.

Once upon a time two amateur botanists were hunting bog mosses on Exmoor, on the confines of the land of Lorna Deane. About the hour of luncheon they found that their enthusiasm had led them far afield, a good hour and a half from the farmhouse which they had made their temporary headquarters. The only place which yielded promise of food was a shepherd's shack half a mile distant, so thither they went. That the shack, or rather, its owner, a small, wiry, dark man with curly hair, could offer nothing better than brown bread, which was woefully "clit," or heavy, and raw onions is neither here nor there. The point was that the roof of the shack was artistically thatched with layers of plaited reeds.

"Feyther taught I th' way to do on," explained the shepherd, with an upward jerk of his thumb toward the roof. "An' his feyther taught 'im afore that, an' his feyther afore that, an' 'back an' back' twill nobody can think."

"A hereditary art evidently," said one of the moss hunters to his companion. "But I never saw thatches like these outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent." Then he said to the man of Devon, "And what is your name, may I ask?"

"Well," replied the shepherd, "most folk call I Van, but my right name be Henry Van Torp. They do say that my gurt-gandefyther were a vitta' against England an' were took prisoner an' married a Devon girl an' settled 'ereabout'—he indicated the southward sweep of the moor—"but these be a lot of foolish tales to ma think in."—Craftsman.

A Town of Macs.

Scotsmen are remarkably successful as colonists. They are also very channish. There are many prosperous settlements in Greater Britain where Caledonians largely predominate, but the names of these localities do not carry that fact on their face. Nobody, however, can be mistaken as to the prevailing nationality in "Macville." This is a town in the Cobalt district of Nova Scotia. You will be perfectly safe in accepting anybody there thus: "I say, Mac"—London Chronicle.

In the Depths of the Sea.

The quantity of light emitted by many minute deep sea animals is so great as to supply over definite areas of the sea bottom a sufficient illumination to render visible the colors of the animals themselves. Some cephalopods are furnished with apparatus which reflects the light from their phosphorescent bodies upon the sea bottom over which they float. This reflecting apparatus is spoken of as "efficient bioluminescent lantern for use in hunting through the abyssal darkness."

The Contrary.

"I dropped some money in the market today," announced Mr. Wyss at the dinner table.

"Again?" exclaimed Mrs. Wyss reproachfully.

"No," replied Mr. Wyss mournfully; "a loss."—Judge's Library.
